Marcy Katz's primary practice spans all areas of family and matrimonial law, including divorce, child custody, spousal and child support, and prenuptial, postnuptial, and separation agreements. Since 2006, she has been actively litigating in Supreme, Family, and Federal Courts. Marcy's experience representing a diverse group of high-net-worth individuals also allows her to work with her clients on all legal matters affecting their lives, including, but not limited to, business decisions and estate planning.

Marcy has expanded her practice to provide general consulting services and act as outside counsel for individuals and business owners in various fields, such as entertainment, hospitality, media, and art. She serves as the liaison between these clients and the first-rate attorneys at Pryor Cashman, who are available to service all of their needs.

Marcy is a regular resource for the media on family law issues. She has appeared on Good Morning America, has been quoted by ABCNews.com, and has been published by the Huffington Post and websites reviewing TV shows and movies focusing on the subject of divorce and related family dynamics.

Previously, she was a family law partner at another major New York law firm.
