Nigel Frank is a member of Pryor Cashman's Corporate Group.

Nigel's practice focuses on complex capital markets transactions including initial public offerings, secondary offerings, unregistered offerings, block trades, and at-the-market offerings. He advises on both equity and debt deals with a concentrated focus in the technology and life sciences industries. As part of his corporate practice, he often represents middle-market companies and large financial institutions in acquisitions, asset-based securitizations, and mezzanine financing deals.

Nigel also maintains an active securities compliance practice in which he counsels public companies on their Exchange Act reporting obligations in addition to miscellaneous matters of corporate governance.

Previously, he was a capital markets associate at a major New York law firm and a research assistant for former CIA Director John Brennan.
